

Assistant Professor of Art Interactive Media/Visual Communication Design (Creative Arts Division)

Recruitment Number: F1803

Application Deadline: Review of applications begins immediately.

Position closes April 30, 2018 (no applications will be considered after this date).

Western Oregon University announces a tenure track Assistant Professor of Art position in interactive media. This position will primarily serve students majoring or minoring in Visual Communication Design as they prepare for creative endeavors in media-saturated cultural contexts. Situated within the Art Department, the VCD program emphasizes aesthetic, conceptual, and technical development. Coursework begins with art and design foundations, and progresses through upper-division concentrations in print design, interactive media, and video/animation.

We seek an energetic new colleague conversant in both graphic design and fine art, whose teaching and creative work engage these fields at high levels and fuse them together. An ideal candidate will be a crossover between design and art, having industry experience as well as their own art practice. A successful candidate's portfolio will demonstrate expertise in graphic design principles applied to interactive web communications, as well as critical inquiry and exceptional creativity.

The ideal candidate will bring a robust pedagogy for art and design that fosters critical engagement with technology, media, and interactivity. He or she will guide students' abilities in design process, creativity, clarity of expression, ethical decision-making, development of concepts, and digital media proficiencies. Teaching is the position's primary responsibility, with particular emphasis on web design and related practices.

Other responsibilities include mentoring, academic advising, active scholarship through creative practice, and a variety of institutional and community service activities. The ideal candidate must be eager to contribute to the planning, development, and teaching of a redesigned BFA degree program. The candidate should be committed to all levels of teaching from introductory to graduate levels and should be capable of teaching and mentoring students of varied disciplines.

WOU is a highly accessible public university embracing a liberal arts education model. Our student body incorporates a high percentage of first-generation college students. The VCD program also attracts many international students. Therefore, we seek candidates with teaching experience in international and/or culturally diverse settings. The Art Department's partnership with the Office of International Education and Development frequently provides opportunities for short-term teaching abroad, particularly in China.

Teaching Duties:

- Upper-division courses in web design and emerging interactive media platforms
- Foundations of digital art and design
- Introductory courses in image creation (including basic digital illustration)
- Usually two courses per 11-week quarter, three courses occasionally
